Editorial.

To all their friends—without as well as within College walls—the Senior Class send fraternal greetings. THE MICRO-COSM, as its name denotes, is a picture of our little world at Dickinson, containing a representation of College institutions and organizations. The Class Associations, Literary Societies, Fraternities, and other combinations that students find it necessary or agreeable to form, for pleasure or profit, are here set forth in full. Hence this is little more than a book of names. To those who have friends herein enumerated and classified, the Microcosm will show the relations and connections of those friends at College; to those who have heretofore in these halls taken part in the duties and pleasures of the student, but who are now engaged in the stern and stirring affairs of practical life, it may recall happy memories of the days gone by; while, even to those who find no familiar name in its pages, and no early recollections awakened by its perusal, it may still prove not wholly uninteresting, for NAMES are most suggestive subjects of discussion and inquiry. Pregnant questions may be stirred concerning their origin, derivation, and influence; and one good work of the Microcosm may be to effect the enlightenment of the possessors of these names concerning their etymological antecedents.

On behalf of the students we desire to express our appreciation of the liberality of the friends of the College, whose generous donations have extended its resources and placed its financial affairs on a permanent foundation. Through their timely assistance the institution has assumed a vigor greater than that of youth, and now looks forward to a promising career of honor and usefulness. But all has not yet been done that is needful. Dickinson College needs half a million of dollars to make it the first institution of the Church and of the land. With such an endowment, with still greater facilities and accommodations than it has, and, above all, with the sympathies and prayers of its friends, the College will be a great power in our country, and will take its proper part in educating and sending forth into active life earnest, Christian young men, qualified and ready for the duties awaiting them.

The Alumni—many of whom are renowned for their positions of honor and usefulness, and have formed records to be reverenced and followed by their successors—will rejoice with us at the prosperity of their Alma Mater.

Among the results of the increased resources of the College, we have time to allude only to the Biblical and Scientific Departments, in which the facilities for studying Nature and Revelation are constantly enlarging. Hebrew, New Testament Greek, Biblical Geography, &c., are successfully taught, with the promise of still greater enlargements of this part of the course. In the Scientific Department, a large well-lighted Laboratory has been furnished with all the modern apparatus for studying Analytical Chemistry and other branches of Natural Science. To all who are seeking an education, Dickinson College extends facilities that are enlarging with the spirit of the age.

In the hope that those who come after us may perpetuate this periodical, and with wishes of success and happiness to all who live in college halls, and to their friends, the Microcosm is ushered into printed existence.

DICKINSON COLLEGE,
December, 1867.

 To devastate the table.
 Alas! if these daily attacks
 Should make provisions scarcer,
 If all the common eatables
 Should come to be quite rare, sir, A
 And Alpha should be forced to look
 For birds to soothe its hunger,
 Alas! what would become of you,
 Oh! Robin's son the younger?
